WELCOME TO COMMUNICATIVE ARTS

Hello,

The faculty and staff of the Communicative Arts Department, invite you to pay us a visit in the Buckley Performing Arts Center, on the Brockton Campus of Massasoit. When you visit, you will see a vibrant student focused community that thrives on the active participation of majors and non-majors alike. With a full theater on campus, home of the Massasoit Theatre Company, and the Digital Media Arts Center, a digital production facility that provides a full range of classroom and college related television and audio production services, students gain real-world experience and have the freedom to explore their own unique projects and ideas. Arts, Humanities & Communications offers courses that serve all majors on campus and a variety of degrees and certificates.

Students in our performing arts classes are constantly rehearsing and trying out new skills in every corner of the building. The student club, Performix has an active schedule of plays to produce, play readings and other performance activities. Our Theater Arts major as listed in this booklet has a wide range of classes taught by area theater professionals, as well as extracurricular clubs and practical application opportunities for any major to get involved in. Media Arts students take classes in Sports Broadcasting, Studio Production, Editing, and Broadcast Journalism. They can choose to focus on Radio or Television Production and often take interdisciplinary courses that combine both mediums. Students also learn the art of podcasting and social media techniques. The Media Axis Club produces independent student television shows that air in Brockton, on our own cable TV channel.

The Buckley Performing Arts Center is home to two theatres, a television studio, and radio studio. Our theater has an active year-long schedule of plays and community events. The TV studio has been recently updated with state-of-the-art equipment, lighting, technology, and renovated sets to provide the best educational tools for our students. The Dale Dorman Radio Studio is the centerpiece of our radio center. We broadcast Massasoit sports, public affairs and student music over WBMS, A.M. and F.M., in Brockton, nightly.

Many of our Communication Arts students transfer to all the major arts colleges and universities in this area and out of state. Our programs provide students with a strong foundation in the arts, whether they are pursuing a liberal arts education or preparing for a professional arts career. We, at Massasoit Community College, strive to provide a first-class education in an environment that is equitable to all. We hope you will join us.

For more information, please email either Communicative Arts Representatives at the addresses below.

BUCKLEY PERFORMING ARTS CENTER

The Buckley Performing Arts Center, named for Senator Anna Buckley, who was instrumental in siting a community college in the City of Brockton, is the theatrical hub of the bustling Fine Arts Building. A resource for the college and the surrounding community, the Fine Arts Building is home to two modern theaters, a state-of-the-art television studio, a radio studio, a painting studio, the Media Center and the college Children's Daycare Center, not to mention classrooms and staff offices. Massasoit produces and promotes a performance series throughout the year for the college and community that encompasses contemporary and classical music, dance and theatre. The Massasoit Theatre Company, a community theatre sponsored by the college produces a season of plays and musicals, and is home to the Massasoit Student Ensemble

The Digital Media Arts Center at Massasoit is a leading edge Digital Production facility that provides a full range of classroom and college related television and audio production services to the Massasoit College Community. The Digital Media Arts Center is a totally hands-on environment which actively recruits students, faculty, and staff to work in the facility on advanced equipment and provides direct access and instruction to any student, faculty, or staff member who wants to learn on, and about, digital media technology in a friendly, creative, and technically advanced facility. Services include full Broadcast Production studio, non-linear editing, multimedia hardware and software labs, and duplication of recorded campus events and programs. Programming produced by the Digital Media Arts Center is cablecast over the regional Massasoit Channel.

Introducing our Radio Studio. Mr. Dorman, a famed Boston radio host, died in November 2014. He had been on the air on various radio stations in Boston for more than 40 years, including WRKO-AM (680) and Kiss 108 WXKS-FM (107.9). He was inducted into the Massachusetts Broadcasters' Hall of Fame in 2010. Mr. Dorman's family has generously donated his entire radio studio to the Massasoit Community College Foundation for use by the Massasoit Community College communicative arts program, complete with signed records and memorabilia. This wonderful donation provides the College an opportunity to expand its program, enabling students to gain hands-on experience working in a studio, one that was formerly used by one of the greats! The Dale Dorman Radio studio is located in the Fine Arts Building, on the Brockton Campus, and is an integral part of the education for our radio students.

We are also fortunate enough to have two indoor theatres and an outdoor stage at the Buckley Performing Arts Center. Indoors you will find our Large Theatre and Little Theatre, which feature performances from Massasoit Theatre Company and Student Ensemble. Our outdoor space is fantastic for showcasing performances such as plays, open mic, and live musical events!

Robert Bowers (In Memorium)

Professor

rbowers@massasoit.mass.edu

Robert Bowers was born in Roxbury Massachusetts and grew up in Dorchester. He was educated in Catholic schools and then went to Boston College High School. He graduated from Boston College in 1969. He earned a BS in Speech/English/Education. Bob then went to Orono, Maine, University of Maine, where he received an MA in Speech/Public Address.

After spending two more years at the University of Maine, Bob moved back to Dorchester. He then taught high school English at Newton Catholic High School. In 1979, he was hired to teach English and speech at Massasoit Community college.

At first Bob taught English in the Latch program and speech courses, but eventually he moved exclusively into the then speech department when he along with Professor Tim Trask built the Liberal Arts Media degree program. With Tim in charge of the TV/radio area, Bob concentrated on rebuilding the radio program. At one point he had 40+ students doing shows on WRPS, Rockland and on our cable channel. Starting with the Massasoit Radio Players composed of faculty, students, staff and administrators, we built an acting company and then started "Radio Classics" a yearly live performance of radio comedies and dramas with sound effects and music. Our first and only host was Ken "Muck" Meyer from WEEI.

We brought to our Brockton stage many old time radio greats such as Alan Young, Gale Storm, Lon Clark, Will Hutchins, Robert Horton and Betsy Palmer. Rosemary Rice the star of "Mama" on TV donated stocks to our scholarship fund that assures our students financial help long after I am gone from the college. One particular joy to me was the inclusion of Boston radio and TV legends in our yearly casts including Jess Cain, Tom Bergeron, Norm Nathan and Jordan Rich. We concluded 22 years of shows in 2019 with a farewell show starring John Astin of "The Addams Family." Two years ago we launched our Liberal Arts degree programs in TV and radio and certificates in TV and radio/podcasting. The Massasoit Radio Players are still performing and completed an hour radio show version of a "Christmas Carol" which aired over a seven radio station hook-up.
